Americans in London: the restaurants, clubs and 'villages' most popular with US expats

From 'outstanding' chippies to prime postcodes, here's where the latest wave of US expats hang out in London

ST JOHN'S WOOD'S CHOICE OF SCHOOLS, VILLAGEY FEEL AND CELEB LOCALS ARE A HUGE DRAW FOR RELOCATING AMERICANS

Marco Previero, Co-Founder & Head of Research at R3Location says:

"When relocating to London, American buyers often gravitate toward the city's most affluent neighbourhoods, prioritising areas with a strong sense of character and identity... While many Americans move to London for professional opportunities, it's not surprising to note that areas like Nine Elms and Kings Cross — despite hosting Apple and Google — have not emerged as prime residential or investment hotspots for this demographic."
